Why is this Important?

While maintaining a healthy lifestyle is important for all people, certain health issues exist specifically among the African-American community, and especially in lower-income, urban spaces. Diseases such as diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, obesity and more are rampant amongst the inner-city. Ironically, it is these same communities that witness aggressive advertising from fast food corporations on a regular basis. Too often, the convenience, cost, and accessibility of these companies compare well and beat out the healthier option of natural, self-prepared meals. In addition, these communities are also victimized by high energy costs.

The G.R.E.A.N. House intends to combat this issue by eventually developing a café that will serve salads, sandwiches, and other meal products at reasonable prices prepared by participants who have been trained to cook with natural ingredients. As a result, we will make healthier meals convenient and affordable, which will assist in inspiring the community to make health a priority.

How Can You Help?

To bring our vision of the G.R.E.A.N. House into fruition, we are in need of commercial kitchenware such as large refrigerators, freezers, storage, etc. The G.R.E.A.N. House is 100% supported by donations. We are calling upon friends and sponsors to help us create a space that will foster healthy, productive, and self-efficient communities.

Neighborhoods.

What is the G.R.E.A.N. House?

Brought to you by the directors of Clean Greens Farm and Market, the G.R.E.A.N. House is a new community initiative to create a model for sustainable living. Our acronym, G.R.E.A.N., stands for Growing and Retrofitting Eco-friendly Agricultural Neighborhoods.

The G.R.E.A.N. House is a residential facility that will be equipped with commercial kitchenware and retrofitted to function in a sustainable manner. The House will serve as a space in which to educate community members of all ages about the importance of growing, preparing, and preserving natural foods. We will also train residents on home retrofitting methods to bring down their energy costs.

Our goals are to make natural, healthy foods accessible to inner-city communities, to equip residents with the knowledge and tools they will need to continue agricultural practices within their own homes, and to inspire participants to maintain the values of taking a hands-on approach to healthy living.
